

ALONE by Judy Rafferty

The sky has fallen

No longer blue

with the colour of infinity,

the hue of limitless possibility

It has fallen

To enshroud me

Wrapping itself in gentle folds

Cocooning me

Separating me

To create a space

Where I am alone

Unreachable untouchable

The sound and colour

of the blue day beyond

Stilled and muted

Filtered by the folds

Of a fallen sky

I nestle into a solitude

Devoid of light and lustre

To wait and heal

Until the folds of time and space release me and I am once again

immersed in the blue light of infinity

the hue of limitless possibility.
